Who cares? who cares?

To the sinful depths of the sinful town.

Up and down, through the dusty street.

Some pale as a maiden's winding sheet, Pale with some dream of sinless yore,

Of a mother's face by a cottage door;

Pale with the flat by Christians made,

Up the long street they come and go,

Aye, to and fro, up and down:

We catch their rich silks rustling flow

No mercy for them the heart betraved

Pale from this thought, "Do as we may,

We're barr'd from the world's own proper way.

(Tpon their bosoms Jewels rare, And the hearts beneath—oh! there, yes, there,

But let not her feet near my pathway stray.

Some with a silk, some a tattered gown;

Some with a bold and desperate glance,

Hurled madly forth like a keen, sharp lance.

And some with the look of a wounded deer,

Knowing the bhounds and death are near

Some pleading charity, bread and pity,

But the cry is drowned in the noisy city.

Will smile on, wile on, fete and flatter,

The girl that's lost—a trifling matter? She's gone, perchance, in her woman's shame.
